

Alright lads listen up. The Author has given me the authority to state what colored state you are in our campaign to meme Templism into reality. There will be multiple teams In our organizational efforts. One team will be of Templist Loyalists, and the other two team will be of facetious opponents of Templism.

The teams are color-coded, and the teams are Templist Loyalists (TL, Green), Anti-Authorian Templists (AAT, Purple) and generic critics of Templism (GCT, Any other color of your choosing.) Their colored-coded names are teams Green, Purple, and Generic. It is pious to signal your allegiance to your team by the color of your profile picture and background. Generics are to larp as normies and shouldn't modify their accounts.

Templist Loyalists are men who will act as defenders of the Author and demand a fanatical adherence to Templist Canon.

Anti-Authorian Templists are men who see Templism as divine, useful, or partially correct, but believe the Author is a power hungry lunatic, a dorky internet loser who "shouldn't have control of Templism, despite his brilliance" a formerly true prophet who lost his way, etc. Stuff like that. The specifics of your disagreements will be based on quarrels with the Author and Green "Templist Loyalists", or theological disagreements with certain parts of the Canon, while also outwardly signalling you agree with some parts. This team may call themselves "dissasemblists", or invent a new name for themselves if they wish.

Generic critics of Templism are those who criticize Templism from an outsider's perspective. Say things like "it doesn't feel right", or that "Templists are gay" or that "I don't believe in schizophrenic cults" Or, even better, engage and disagree with the philosophy entirely in believable ways. (hard mode, but pious). Basically, act like actual critics who are fully opposed to the religion, not just The Author and other Templists.

Teams may be switched, but this requires a larp post. Purple to Green will see me "convince" you of your facetious errors and you swearing allegiance to The Author and/or "Adolf Hitler who is The Author". Green to Purple will see you denouncing The Author or a aspect of Templism, though you will still consider yourself a "Templist" or "Templist ally". During a team switch you MUST change your account pictures to match your new team's color. So, a Generic or Purple must have a Green themed profile when they convert to team Green.

Teams Green and Purple will post memes revolving around their team, its mission, and/or its color with the hashtags #GreenFever and #Purplemania, respectively. Both teams will also include #Templism In these memed posts when appropriate or semi-randomly; insults, bitching, drama, anime girls, and arguing are encouraged but not required. If you have nothing to say, posting a meme for your team is just as valid for ranking up your individual color state as making a argument for your team.

For now, Templist Loyalists, and critics will be those the Author dictated earlier. Critics who have followed the #Purplemania meme trend already or who are known for talking about Templism will be Purple, and those that aren't known will be generics.

Each individual will also receive a color state, the requirements of which are subject to updates. This color state is not a real rank within a Templist organization, it is just a representation of your contributions to spreading Templism online within your assigned role according to my own arbitrary metric.

RED STATE individuals are those that have posted about Templism within their assigned team roles occasionally or not at all for a week.

YELLOW STATE individuals are those that have posted about Templism within their assigned team roles once a day for a week.

GREEN STATE individuals are those who have posted about Templism within their assigned team roles five times or more a day in separate threads for a week.

Everyone including myself is starting at a RED individual state, your color state is subject to change at the end of every week upon my REPORT. Next Monday I will hand out color state rewards for posts as part of my REPORT, I will also review the criteria and update the requirements for attaining Red, Yellow, and Green state on Mondays.

This might seem autistic and retarded but games like this will be the first step in actually organizing Templist Harbringers in a militaristic manner. Many of you are likely more virtuous than I am, but The Author saw fit to give me the this power and I will use it to advance Templism as a meme online, so as to advance it in meatspace and our personal lives eventually by extension.

It should be noted that the number of posts I listed as a requirement for each color state is a heuristic for general levels of activity, not a set guideline. If you make around 7 posts of week you will achieve yellow state, if you make around 35 posts a week you will achieve green state.

Green state is for "heroes" who have dedicated much of their energy to the Templist cause. Yellow state is for people who are useful to the cause but not "heroically". I expect you all to achieve yellow state at-least.

I would ask you to treat this seriously. Anyone who doesn't post about Templism will not be rejected or insulted but will simply receive a red color state from me. You are welcome to hang out but you are not really contributing to memeing Templism, so as to advance its position in the world.